Regulations for the Use of Special Collections of the Gutenberg Museum

The special collections of the Gutenberg Museum include all exhibits, incunabula, manuscripts and graphic sheets.

For each signature and inventory number, the “Application for Permission to Use Special Collections in the Gutenberg Museum” must be completed before use.

Only three objects can be issued on the same day. In the case of particularly valuable or endangered objects, the number can be limited to one object.

Please note in detail when using the objects:

- Books are used on underlayments provided for this purpose and are only opened up to 140°. Violent bending of the volumes is prohibited.
- Only pencils are used for taking notes.
- The use of cotton gloves may be necessary.
- Special examinations must be cleared with the conservator.
- Photographs may be taken only after consultation.
- Copies and photographs made by the Gutenberg Museum are subject to a charge.
- When leaving the reading room, objects must be temporarily returned to the reading room supervisor.
- Objects with loose graphics and multi-part objects will be checked for completeness in the presence of the user. The appropriate time must therefore be allowed.

In a publication, holdings of the Gutenberg Museum are to be cited with their complete signature or inventory number as well as the ownership reference “Gutenberg Museum, Mainz”.

Written permission must be obtained before publishing photographs or images of Gutenberg Museum objects.

Users agree to state the purpose of the works viewed: Subject of the work project and title of the planned publication.

In order to build up a comprehensive literature documentation and in the interest of providing information for other scholars, users are requested to send the Gutenberg Museum Library a specimen copy of any publication that deals with an object of the Gutenberg Museum.

If free distribution is not possible, the work will be offered to the Gutenberg Museum at a reduced price or the bibliographic data of the publication will be communicated.
